In addition to configuring computers to connect over a wireless network, the Samsung Wireless Connection Manager Suite (SMC) also lets users set up mobile phones to connect wirelessly, so they can make phone calls over a computer network. The Mobile Phone Manager allows users to select a USB modem for a Samsung mobile phone and install the necessary drivers, while the Mobile Data Manager makes it possible to synchronize content and settings with a computer. The SIM Manager enables users to view the status of their mobile SIMs and use the phone number for billing information. The Samsung HDTV Market recently took a great leap forward with the introduction of many new high definition television sets available on the market. The HTSF-F64P and HTSF-F65P models have been out on the market for some time now, and both are simple and affordable high definition televisions. Although the television is relatively simple in its design, it is nice to see some new innovations incorporated into its design. These features make the TV stand out from the crowd and make it desirable for users to own. The HTSF-F65P is a 4.3-inch 65-inch HDTV. It comes with an LED backlight that is similar to that found in most high definition televisions on the market today. With a 1080p resolution, the TV is capable of displaying crisp and clear images. The television has a 1,000:1 contrast ratio and a 1,800:1 black level. Although the television is relatively simple in its design, it is nice to see some new innovations incorporated into its design.
