Q: Github: How to create private branch for a private repository? I have a private github repository with a username and password. From the private repo I want to create a new branch for the master branch of another repository. I want to do the same thing from but I have an user with a private github repository. Using the command `git push --set-upstream origin +[username]/[reponame]/master` I have an error message. How can I create a branch from my private repository? I don't want to share my username and password.

A: You are correct that you are prompted for your username and password when using a private repository. The OP @VincentK also commented that he thought he had used ssh keys, but that this was not possible due to his situation. In order to do the following, you will need to enter your username and password when prompted. Alternatively, you could use a service such as BitBucket or LaunchPad. Once you have done this, you will be asked for your passphrase. A passphrase is used to validate your identity to prevent unauthorized access to your repository. You will not be asked for this passphrase when creating a

----- Sensitive and selective sensor for the real-time detection of nafcillin hydrolysis using an electrogenerated fluorescence probe. A nafcillin fluorogenic probe has been developed for the real-time detection of nafcillin hydrolysis in neutral aqueous media by a voltammetric technique. The electrochemical sensor was prepared by chemically attaching nafcillin to the glassy carbon electrode. The electrode was characterized by cycl 3e33713323
