What's new in Dino Galaxy Tennis:

Kygo is a 30-year-old songwriter and DJ from Denmark who has been making dance music since he was 14. His fifth studio album, Beauty Behind the Madness, features his first collaboration with North American electronic superstar, Tove Lo. The album includes chart-topping hits such as "I Want U To Know", and "What the Water" featuring American rapper Kevin Gates. It was nominated for a Grammy and is the number one album on the Billboard Dance/Electronic charts. Kygo is currently touring the USA and Canada all summer on his bando 32 event. As part of his recent promotional activities, he graced us with his presence this weekend at the Virtual Reality Music Awards in Los Angeles, California. He created several experiences including the most compelling one, Carry Me, which I had the privilege to try out. Kygo hosting the Vrma is no easy task, but he makes the most out of it and connects with his audience at a very personal level. He has himself a band that is comprised of four young women, one of whom started playing an instrument around the time Kygo was born. They perform his songs and dance on stages all across the world. It's clear to see that Kygo sees music as a calling, and music videos have become part of that calling. He interacts with them in much the same way his listeners interact with him, making them as proud as he is of them. As for the VR industry he puts his sound into perspective. "We're all in a learning phase, learning about how we use VR," Kygo tells me in his dressing room backstage. “I feel like we’re beginning to mature as a medium and use VR to its true potential. VR is still very new and we’ve barely scratched the surface. We don’t have any content yet, so I’m excited about what lies ahead.” Bando 32 is Kygo’s new addition to his diversified media campaign, and the bando 32 debuted on July 17, 2017. His first of its kind event had nearly a million registered users and was followed by several other events that made a huge impact on the industries that attend. Kygo’s posters for the event were seen in large cities across the globe. We were given posters to promote his event, and I also was able to personally receive a poster. They have a large impact
