Tags: Garmin, Streetpilot, androidQ: Designed with Backbone.js: Custom control events and Keybindings My Backbone.js Model has an events property. This property is a map from DOM events (to models) that the model's view binds to. In my specific situation, I have a canvas that (among other things) contains a "drag" object. The behavior of this drag object is implemented using a jQuery UI sortable. My form view binds to the model that contains the model's events as a hash of model properties: var CustomView = Backbone.View.extend({ initialize: function () { _.bindAll(this,'render', 'onChange'); this.collection = new MyModel(); // Bind model events to the view this.model.bind('change', this.render, this); this.model.bind('destroy', this.destroy, this); // Bind canvas ui events to the view $('#canvas').sortable({ update: function () { this.trigger('onChange'); } }); }, render: function () { this.$el.html(this.template()); this.delegateEvents(); return this; }, delegateEvents: function() { this.$el.bind('keydown', this.onKeyDown, this); }, onKeyDown: function(e) { if(e.keyCode === 13){ this.saveChanges(); } } }); When I add a new model to the collection that is being presented in this view, I have to invoke Backbone.sync() to trigger the changes. This has the effect of invoking the onChange event of my model. Is this the correct method for triggering the event? If this is the correct method, is there a standard way to trigger event from a keydown?
