Image copyright AFP A Brexit deal has been signed off by prime minister Theresa May - at least for now. Here are five things that have changed since she first negotiated it and those which remain the same. What was the legal agreement? It's just over 1,000 pages long - quite a number when you think about it. But it covers much of what has been agreed. It ends the political uncertainty that has hung over Britain since 23 June 2016. It will create a new, deep and special, two-way partnership on trade and security and will not lead to a return of direct control. It will guarantee that there will be no direct control - that will include anything from financial services to fishing rights. What new arrangements are being signed off? Britain will form a new economic partnership for 40 years, which means the 28-nation EU will cover everything that has been agreed. Only the rules for managing the vast single market will be changed. Any new systems set up by the UK will have to go to the European Commission for approval before they take full effect. The UK will get special treatment when it comes to new regulation - by the Commission and other EU bodies - but not when it comes to trade in manufactured goods and agriculture, and to the extent that the agreement requires joint rules. The UK will also have some opt-outs from rules on state aid, and a new "level playing field" mechanism to ensure that any UK regulations are as close as possible to the existing rules in the EU. What does the new agreement do differently from the original one? The original draft agreement hadn't had anywhere near the backing from the EU as had been hoped. But by the time it was presented to the EU it was hard to see how it could fail. Even the EU's chief Brexit negotiator Michel Barnier has admitted he had been "surprised" by the changes. There have been some changes from the legal agreement to the legal agreement. For example, the original legal agreement said that the agreement would be binding on the UK as soon as it became a party to international agreements on aviation and on customs. The new one says that the customs arrangements will be in place "as soon as is practicable", and in any event before the UK leaves the EU in March 2019. And, in a nod to the public's concerns about immigration, the new legal agreement says that the European Commission will have to approve

[Effect of diltiazem and midazolam on bronchial circulation in patients with bronchial asthma]. The effect of diltiazem and midazolam on the bronchial circulation was studied using the double lumen tube pulmonary artery (DLTPA) in 7 patients with bronchial asthma. The bronchial circulation was studied by means of the DLTPA technique. The systemic blood pressure was measured by the Swan-Ganz catheter and respiratory flow was monitored using the pneumotachograph. After administration of diltiazem or midazolam (0.125 mg/kg), in doses of 0.5 or 1.0 mg/kg, respectively, the bronchial blood flow was significantly decreased by both drugs. No significant differences were found in the bronchial circulation, the systemic circulation, or the heart rate between the control and drug groups. Thus, this study demonstrated that the bronchial circulation was maintained in a sufficient level during the treatment with both drugs.I went to the library and came across this. Unfortunately, it had not yet been downloaded yet, but I think I will need to do that asap. SOON. I'm just kidding, of course. I have a drawer full of old science magazines (that I still keep because they were new when I first read them), and I'm definitely not going to read them again. But, when I did a little research, I came across a few articles of interest. First off is the age of the earth, which is presented in an article about the radioactive decay of uranium, which can be used to calculate the age of earth. The article mentions that the earth is estimated to be about 4.5 billion years old. They say: Using accurate data on Uranium's half-life, its abundance in the earth, and a range of other factors, the computer could determine a mean age of the earth.The mean age of the earth is 4.5 billion years. The computer determines the mean age of the earth by using radiometric dating of rocks, which came from the earth. The mean age of the earth is determined by calculating a mean abundance of the isotope potassium-40 which is not consumed in the decay of U-238. In this way, the computer can determine how long it would have taken for the Earth to form, and thus determine how old the Earth is.
