My journey to becoming a positive person As you know, I've always been a private person. I don't like to share a lot of personal information about myself. I'm pretty sure that you don't have anything in common with me, but you do know that I'm a Christian. I also have a lot of friends who like to share a lot of information about themselves. I am beginning to love myself more than God, and that is good, because He has been the only one who has loved me the way He should have. Now, if God loves me, and He does, why would He send me to do certain things in my life? Would He not have loved me, if He wanted me to do different things? I was wrong. In the end, you may not know me. You don't have to. You can love me, because I've become more than my own self. I
