Thursday, March 4, 2011 The retirement and misery of the winter... Last night I made an ambitious attempt at a sweater. The pattern was something I found in one of the catalogs for Country Living, I don't know the name of the pattern but it was in very good shape so I decided to try it out. I chose worsted weight yarn and picked a size I could knit easily, it would fit better after it was pulled out of the blocking board. It is a garter st along the bottom edge and then it is one row of reverse stockinette and a small section of brioche. It is a delicious looking sweater, just not my size. So I went ahead and blocked it and loved the way it looked so i'm tempted to try it on today. But as it is, it didn't make it into any of my last two knitting guilds. I have in the back of my mind, another sweater that
