A: No, you don't have to buy new books for the exams. The books are revised every year for the exam, so you just need to find the book that you bought 2 years ago, in current edition. You don't need to buy the books you can download the exams from the internet. You don't need to go in a book shop and buy new books since their prices are already inflated. Monday on CNN's "Reliable Sources," Washington Post columnist Jonathan Capehart attempted to dismiss the contention that the White House was engaged in a cover-up regarding President Donald Trump's reported conversation with Ukrainian president Volodymyr Zelensky by declaring he wasn't "upset" about what was "blown out of proportion" by the media and the White House press was responsible for that. Capehart claimed, "The idea that there is some conspiracy to obstruct justice and stonewall some sort of investigation, none of that has been proven, you know, my jaw dropped at that point because I just didn't — you know, it was blown out of proportion, and it really angered me and it still is that whole idea that we're talking about an impeachment because I'm not upset that there was a conversation." After host Brooke Baldwin pointed to Trump calling information the "Biden" and CNN, she asked, "But, you said he's avoiding 'the Biden' in the Ukraine call. You know, what — why would he say that?" Capehart replied, "I don't think he's avoiding the Biden. I don't think that's what people who have been listening to this, who are very familiar with it, believe happened. What people believe happened is that he's been kind of covering up." He continued, "I mean, he's complained all along about the media not doing their job. And, you know, I do think that, you know, on that side of things, the press has played a very, you know, a very key role. And, you know, at this point, it's blown out of proportion, as you pointed out. And, you know, the idea that there is some conspiracy to obstruct justice and stonewall some sort 6d1f23a050
