As a married couple, they have created a record called Coffee Time: Songs of Summer. Gabriella and Antoine met in 2008, when they were photographed for a documentary produced by the French national television channel France 3. Since then, they have collaborated regularly, and their most recent project, Coffee Time: Songs of Summer, was conceived during a high-altitude airplane journey. "We had never been on an airplane together before," Gabriella recalls. "On my way to New York to work with a recording engineer, I was on a plane and he was on the plane after me. "Our plan was to try the new coffee," she says. "He knew that I had a headache, and he suggested that we put on some music. I was listening to Coldplay and he was listening to Pink Floyd. "We started playing with it and realised that we were both totally blown away by the experience." Reacting to the experience of a gorgeous view and a good cup of coffee, Gabriella and Antoine continued recording, and the song "What Do I See?" was born. They set out to try and capture the way that they were feeling while listening to the music. "The way we did it, we had this idea that each song is like an event and the atmosphere that makes up the song," says Gabriella. Gabriella and Antoine have been honing their composition skills since they met. Gabriella says, "We actually started putting some of the songs we had written together, and working them out. "We went to Ghent because we were doing a lot of work in the studio there," she says. Gabriella and Antoine met at the IRCAM studio in Ghent and went to Edinburgh, where they recorded a masterful version of The Ride in Stereo. Both Gabriella and Antoine also collaborated with a young singer-songwriter named Ludovic
